Comments- I am a Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC) who utilizes a client-centered approach, meaning I want to know your history, feelings and emotions, while fostering strategies for self-realization. In this way counseling becomes an assisting process, rather than dependence association. I strive for the client to find their own way, but at the same time I recognize when direction, guidance and information are needed. The therapeutic relationship that I develop with the client is our foundation from which to build.

My counseling environment is safe, non-judgmental, confidential and in a private setting. During a counseling session there is: self-expression, exploration, reflection and clarification of feelings, better understandings of self and others, the realization of options and consideration of all choices, and helping to create and make changes for a better life.

Comments- I specialize in "difficult" students. I believe many students have been effected by traumatic experiences in their lives and are struggling to manage very difficult residual dysregulated feelings in their bodies. My approach is 3 pronged: #1 Traumatic resolution work, #2 Body Awareness, #3 Developing a personal "Toolkit" to handle those difficult feelings. These methods may help to avoid the pitfall of the psychiatric diagnosis and medication cycle. This work is especially important for young people who might tend to use substances, cutting, sexual acting out etc.... to deal with their overwhelming feelings. Empowering them now with effective tools can help give them a leg up to a healthy, productive, and satisfying future.
